

Metro Ports Announces Organization Changes

Metro Ports, the new brand of Metropolitan Stevedore Co., Southeast Crescent Shipping Co., Cape Fear Bulk LLC and Southeast Maritime Services LLC, which holds the Savannah International Terminal, recently announced five organization changes.

Robert Waterman has been named regional vice president of West Coast operations. Waterman, who began his career at Metropolitan Stevedore Co. in 1986, worked in various positions and locations and most recently served as vice president of bulk operations, managing bulk operations in Long Beach, Calif., and Anacortes, Wash.

Frank Divona was appointed regional vice president of West Coast business development. Divona began his maritime industry career with Crescent Wharf and Warehouse in 1975 and joined Metropolitan Stevedore Co. in 1985.

Ted Winter is Metro Ports' regional vice president of East Coast business development. Winter is a 30-year industry veteran whose experience prior to joining Metro in 2004 to develop the company's growth on the U.S. East Coast included management and executive positions with Federal Marine Terminals in the Great Lakes and U.S. East Coast, Texas American Shipping in Houston and Ridley Terminals in British Columbia.

Christopher SanGiovanni, who joined Metropolitan Stevedore Co. in 2006, has been appointed director of safety. Holding a bachelor's degree in ecology, SanGiovanni's ten years of experience in safety include being a member of the JetBlue Airways start-up management team, where he created the airline's environmental, health and safety program.

Patrick Hall joins Metro as the new director of East Coast business development. Recently retired from Cooper/T. Smith, Hall brings 37 years of industry experience in operations and marketing. Hall is a graduate of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N.Y.

"These appointments further strengthen the Metro Ports management team as we continue to grow and expand our nationwide operations," said Metro Ports CEO James Callahan.

Metro Ports is a holding of Nautilus International Holding Corp. With 85 years of industry experience, Nautilus excels in providing outstanding services to various segments of the shipping community. Additional company information may be found on Web sites: www.metroports.com and www.nautilusintl.com.